Public Sentiment in Cleufueges-The Outing Arms.

The following extract from a private letter, written on the 10th lust, in Clenfaegos, gives a vivid picture of the condition of affairs in that portion of Cuba and some interesting particulars of the recent contreak there:—

Knowing with what anxiety you await reliable information concerning the state of tangs in this island, I will endeavor, as briefly as possible, to inform you of the current events.

Cienfuegos, Sagua, Villa Clara, Trinidad, Remember, Colon and Cardenas are in arms. Our men have taken possession of Cumanayagua, Camarones, Ciegomontero and other military districts, but the greatest order is preserved and private property respected. Our cry is "Liberty and down with despotsism." The fielias are covered with insurgents. Villa Clara is full of particades, and they are being constructed here with all possible speed. The excitement is intense.

structed here with all possible speed. The excitement wintense. The Spanish grocers have all the power in their hands and cry for the blood of Cubans, whose only crime is their having been born here. They tell us not to think of liberty which we are never to enjoy, but to prepare ourselves, like our slaves, to receive lashes from the all-mercital hands of the Spanish government. The Spanish power hands are dead to the streets calling us by the most abusive and insulting entities. The city is more like a camp than anything else. All the Spaniards are well armed, but it is impossible for the Cubans to obtain a single weapon, as the stores are owned by Spaniards, who very naturally will not sell them to us. They insult us to our faces, leaving us the alternative either of shouting "Long live Spain," and "Death to Cuba," or of meeting instant death.

Arrests are being made day and night without an order from the authorities, these being entirely poweriess. The Spaniards are headed by Lombo, Garcia, the Moort, Quintanilla, Luis Arrebarena and others of the same stamp.

order from the authorities, these being entirely powerless. The Spaniards are headed by Lombo, Garcia the Moor), Quintanilla, Luis Arrebarena and others of the same stamp.

Do not believe that I exaggerate. It is all too true, and I believe the island is ruined.

Don Luis de Arredondo, at the head of 1,600 men, is in quiet possession of Cumanayagua. Don Juan Diaz Villegas, with 2,000 men, is in possession of Camarones. Don Juan Jimenez, owner of the plantation bestano; Don Leandro del Juneo and his son Luis, Garceran, Cueto (the lawyer) and Adolph Cabados, an ex-colonel of the federal army and Consul of the United States, who has gone over to the insurrents with the captains of four American vessels and their crews, now at another in this port; Juan Martinez del Valle and others are the principal leaders of our forces.

These inducatial men have induced more than ninety per cent of the inabitants of the jurisdiction of Cleniuegos to follow them. You may form an idea of the scarolly of money here when I tell you that we consider ourselves lucky if we can let our farnished houses free of rent to persons who promise to take good care of them for us. Families are emigrating to New Orleans, Jamnica, Caracao and Carthagena, and even to New York, notwithstanding the rigor of the season. I consider myself a roined man, but I am willing to sacrifice all to have the satisfaction of seeing my country rid of the Spanish yoke.

Withdrawal of the California Steam Company—General Guilerrez Turned Ban-dit—Signs of Revolution—Two Outrages Re-dressed by Our Naval Commander.

dressed by Our Naval Commander.

MAZATLAN, Jan. 20, 1869.

A regular season of sensations and excitement afficts this part of the world at present. Scarcely had the populace recovered from the thundering revolutionary sensation of last week than the California steamer of yesterday brought the news that the California, Oregon and Mexico Steamship Company of San Francisco had determined to suspend the regular running of their steamships in Mexican waters. This brought general dismay to the American portion of the community, as it makes American interests here look somewhat gloomy and hopeless. On the other hand, the foreign merchants are isughing in their steeves, because the intelligence is just what they have been hoping for; it strikes a biew at American commerce—what little there was of it—and leaves the field almost free to their mastery. Between these two parties stand the natives, who would not care if an American steamer never came here, as they are entirely oblivious to the best interests of their counters. try. When we say the natives the reader will un-derstand us to mean the controlling powers, both of the general and State governments. Indeed, it is rather to be presumed that the authorities are glad or the event, from the fact that they have thrown of the event, from the fact that they have thrown every obstacle in the way of the success of the line. It has been a source of infinite trouble for the agent of the company here to transact business with the officials, and it was only by repeated requests that the subsidy money was procured at each trip of the steamers. The authorities at San Blas have figured up a big bill against the company for pilotage and lighthouse dues (imaginary items), and the officials at Acapulco always sent a government pilot on board, who charged a round sum for his unrequired services. These are only a few of the items that might be enumerated. The company likewise will have with his coancial statement for the year 1867-8. The revenue for 1867-8 is £47,212 more than 1868-7 and £40,732 more than 1868-7 and £40,732 more than 1868-7 and £40,732 more than the average of three years ending September 30, 1867. The revenue of the country had been £344,102, the expenditure £343,678; leaving a surplus of £423 in favor of general revenue. The revenue for 1888-9 is computed at £364, £20 and the expenditure at £365,176. The government proposes to expend this year in the importation of 1,466 East india immigrants £28,000.

Controdore Phillimore has a project on foot for connecting Jamaica and Cuba by a small steam launch, to run between Santiago de Cuba and Port Antonio two ca week, with correspondence, newspapers and telegrams only. The first outlay is estimated at £500, and it is expected that if the government undertakes to continue it the merchants on both sides will contribute to its maintenance.

The Haytien Consul at Kingston has objected to permitting vessels to enter at her Majesty's Customs which have come from blockades ports in Hayti. Sir John Porter Grant (the Governor) has settled the matter by directing all vessels from Hayti to be entered and cleared at the Custom Heuse, irrespective of the question of blockade. The Consul has since demanded that no Haytien vessel should be entered at the Custom House until he has examined the ship's register. This matter is now said to be under discussion by the Custom House authorities.

A storm of indignation swept the State then, and from every section of the country came the most unmeasured denunciation of the slander and its author, who still disgraces the bench that is frequently graced by the Chief Justice of the United States. The Liquer Bealers—The Excise Law and Palitical Parties.

A liquer dealer, signing himself "A. Kerwick, First avenue," writes us at length about the apathy of the Legislature in regard to proposed modifications of the "present odious and stringent Excise law." The democrats, he says, again shift the he believes that with a Governor in favor of a fair adjustment and "a house pretty evenly balanced" they could pass a just and equitable bill if they took up the matter scriously and in earnest. He advises the democrats to beware; for, if they keep to their present course of action, the liquor dealers, as a body, will throw their influence against them. Our correspondent is surprised that the republicans do not move in the matter, for they might secure the sympathy and support of the liquor dealers. He counsels that the Liquor Dealers' Society should at once adopt resolutions threatening to oppose the re-election of every member of either House not earnestly and heartily working for such a modification, and if the present organization will not move he hopes for ward meetings to send delegates to a convention of liquor dealers from the whole Metropolitan district. All that the liquor dealers want, he says, is that the license be fixed at a fair figure, with leave to sell during certain hours on Sunday, as in Empland and elsewhere, and that they be not treated as if they were common cuthroats and robbers.

The Condition of the Streets.

An anonymous writer desires public attention to be called to the condition of those streets around tenement houses as being horrible during nine months in the year; that there are bad street lamps, partially not head a some wife.

on stages or omnibuses à la Parisienne. He says that many persons are obtiged to pay double fare, the driver allowing the money handed him either to be blown away by the wind or carelessly to drop. The amount lost in this way is said to be considerable every year, and he recommends the introduction of conductors to remedy this as well as many other evils well known to stage riders.

Suggestions for Speedy Travel Through the City.

"Country Reader" suggests a new plan for affording speedy transit to the people of the city and vicinity from Harlem river to the Battery, which he believes "combines the greatest number of advan-tages with the fewest objectionable features." He proposes that the Hudson River, Harlem and New Haven railroads should unite their termini on the north side of Harlem river; they should then unite with the several companies now endeavoring to secure speedy transit by underground, pheumatic and other methods, unite their capital, purchase the right of way from Harlem to the Battery, and erect an archway wide enough for four tracks, midway between the west line of Second avenue to the cast line of First avenue, with wide carriage ways on either side. The trains might run over this arched way, and it might include a pneumatic tule for a purcel delivery. Under the arches arrangements for market stands throughout the length might be made, and thus not only safe and rapid transportation of passengers and delivery of parcels, but also market accommodations through the whole length of the city, could be secured.

"Uptown" writes us to say that he rides daily in the Second avenue cars and purchases the HERALE the Second avenue cars and purchases the Herald from the newsboys. On the 17th inst, the conductor refused to admit the news venders into the car, stating that they had orders to that effect, and that one of the conductors had been suspended the day previous for disobeying the injunction. Our corres-pondent intimates that if any "suspending" is to be done, the experiment should be tried upon the com-pany's officers, as the Newsboys' Association would probably furnish the hemp gratis.

The Growth of New York. A "Civil Engineer" takes the same view as others of the growth of New York and vicinity. The present boundary of the city, he says, should be measured by a circumference twenty-five miles distant from Union square. In 1860 the city's population was 814,000, and the suburbs within that circumference. s14,000, and the suburbs within that circumference, in round numbers, 750,000, To-day the city has 1,000,000 inhabitants and the suburbs within the twenty-five miles from Union square 1,225,000, thus giving this, the metropoias, fifty miles in diameter and a population of 2,225,000. The average annual growth of the country has been three per cent and of cities five per cent for the last eighty years, doubling the city population every sixteen years, which would, in 1884, give a metropolitan population of 4,500,000, and in 1900 of 9,000,000.

In reply to a paragraph in the HERALD among the "Notes about Town," the president of this associa tion, Mr. R. R. West, informs us that it exists in full vigor and efficiency, numbering among its 1,600 full vigor and efficiency, numbering among its 1,600 contributing members the foremost merchants and dinancial institutions in the cities of Brooklyn and New York. During the year 1868 there were reported to their employers 1,004 persons as having visited gambling houses; 700 of these retained their places and have reformed—only one being found and reported a second time. The defalcations by employes thus discovered varied in amounts from fifteen to $80,000. Great care is taken not to be imposed upon by agents and others, and all these reports were proved correct except one.

Advice to Ladles.

A lady, rising the other day in a ritis avenue singe, near the door, saw her dress move, and suddenly feit the hand of a boy, standing outside on the steps, feeling for her pocket. She writes us of this as a warning to all ladies riding in stages.

A Home for Workingwomen. "S. K. R.," of Cleveland, Ohio, sends us a lengthy communication on this subject. Our correspondent starts out with the complaint that the wages of women compelled to work for their support are en-tirely inadequate, and that hence comfortable homes. where they could obtain cheap board, should be pro vided for them, to seep them from falling, through the want of the necessaries of life. She refers to the successful Woman's home in Chicago; to the progress and behitful increase of the Workingwoman's and Yong Woman's Homes in New York, and that the Women's Christian Association is about establishing a similar institution in Cleveland, for which the aid of the philanthropic is solicited. Our correspondent very well remarks that one of the chief faulta lies in the education of youth, and she asserts that there is no sacer way to keep men pure than to place young women in a position to remain pure. These "Homes for Women" very soon become self-sustaining, and the sooner, the larger the number of inmates becomes, paying a moderate rate for lodging and beard. This is certainly a subject of great importance, and merits the carnest consideration of ail. vided for them, to seep them from falling, through Murder in New Brunswick.

[Correspondence of the St. Louis Democrat, Feb. 17.]

On a clear November Thanksgiving day in Isso the writer was passing with a team through one of the streets in the suburos of New Brunswick, N. J. A small two story frame house was built near the street, and I noticed in the front windows two coverlides plinned up with forks near the top of the upper sash. My impression was that there was some one sick in the room and that they wanted to exclude the light. Just as I reached the house I heard a most terrible and unearthicy grean. My first thought was that I had come from a servant girl that I had noticed leaning out of the second story window of a large house across some vacant lots near, and washing the outside of the upper sash, and turning my eyes in that direction she was gone, and I supposed she had fallen in the yard, benind a high fence, and was built injured. The impression of great personal injury or foul play was so strong on the mind that I stopped at the next cross street and thought I would direct some person to the house to investigate the matter; that either the girl had fallen out of the window or that there was some one boing killed in the house where the covertides were pinned up at the front windows. Being a stranger in the town and not seeing any one that I thought would be a proper person to make the investigation, I drove on to the steamboat landing and at once took passage on the steamboat and went to New York. The next day the news came out in the desity papers that a Mr. Suydam, the cashier of the Mechanics Eank of that place, had left his nome at eleven A. M. and was to be buck in time for dinner, and had not since been heard of. The river was dragged, a large reward offered for the recovery of the body, and every chort made for six weeks to recret out the mystery of his disappearance.

Robinson was taken up, tried, convicted and hung. He confessed the murder—he owed Suydam a note of $300, secured by deed of trust on his house, and had requested him to come to his house that day and hour and would pay him. Death of an Old Citizen in Westfield—Jour-nalism—The Fisk-Bowles Fusa in a Now Phase—General Butler as an Editor. Westfield, Mass., Feb. 19, 1969.

The funeral of Jasper R. Rand, Esq., one of our oidest and most highly esteemed citizens, occurs to-day. The deceased came to this town nearly fifty years ago, simply a mechanic, but finally became one of the most successful whip manufacturers here or in the United States. He rose to distinction as a in the United States. He rose to distinction as a business man and statesman by his native strength of mind, and was the artificer of his own fame. He was a whig of the old Clay and Webster school, and a republican of thesoe later days. Our town honored him by sending him to our General Court as representative a few years since, and he was an honor to the town in that capacity. He leaves four sons, oue of whom, after T. Rand, of your city, has accumulated a fortune in the manufacture of powder during the past ten or welve years. He is a man of superior business talent and sterling integrity.

There is considerable excitement in this place about a new paper to be started here about the 1st of March next in opposition to the old paper, the News Letter. The new paper will be under the supervision and be supported by two bank presidents and a few wealthy bank directors, while the old paper has the masses on its side and will need no pecuniary aid except that which comes from its old and new patrons. The old paper has increased its edition 200 since the excitement of the new paper commenced.

The Springfield Union, as well as the Republican, increased its edition 200 since the excitement of the new paper commenced.

The Springfield Union, as well as the Republican, has a good many readers in this town, and is steadily gaining patrons in Western Massachusetts. Rumor has it that General Butler and Mr. Fisk, who had a "set-to" with Mr. Bowies, of the Republican, are making arrangements to purchase the Union, and if they do Mr. Bowies will find a rival that he will feel bound to notice. Whatever may be said of General Butler's past political life, one thing is true, viz., he has superior talent and will eventually be the foremost man of the Massachusetts delegation in Congress.

THE CASE OF JAMES GRANT, INDICTED FOR THE MURDER OF H. RIVES PULLARD.

He LASE OF JARKS SLAM, MULLIEF FOR IN HE MUNUER OF HE LASE OF JARKS SLAM, MULLIEF FOR IN HE MUNUER OF HE LASE.

[From the Richmond Whig, Feb. 18.]

In Judge Burnham's court yesterday the argument was concluded on the motion of the Attorney for the Commonwealth to commit the accused to jail until the time fixed for his trial hext Monday.

Judge Ould, one of his course, opposed the motion with much earnestness. His chent, he said, had appeared in court promptly and put hin his plea to the indictment, and has not evinced the slightest disposition to shirk the fullest investigation of the charge sligged against him. It is the object of bail to assure themstendance of a party accused of crime, and if the necessary to increase the amount in order to render the attendance of the accused more certain, the Court could increase the bail to any sum deemed sufficient and it would be given. Something had been said by the opposing counsel about the presence of money in this case. The only evidence, however, of this being the case is found in the fact that a gentleman has been employed to prosecute the accused while the commonwealth has a paid officer whose duty it is to affend to its interests.

Mr. Bundy, Attorney for the Commonwealth, contended that under the statute bail is not allowable, and that the case, now that the accused has been indicted for deliberate murder, presents a different aspect from what it did before the Mayor when he bailed him. He cited the cases of Sickles, who killed Key, General Cole, who killed Parkman, to show that neither their position, wealth nor the circumstances aurrounding their cases were sufficient to secure them bail. The statute governing bail in the States of Massachusetts and New York are very similar to that of Virginia, and all are based upon the common naw doctrine of England. He reminded the Court of the common way of the control and main reply to fuffice ould, remarked that in representing the Com-tion in this case.

Mr. Gilmer explained his position, and in reply to Judge Ould, remarked that in representing the Commonwealth in this case he occupied the same independent position which he ever occupies when he appears in a case in her courts.

The Court reserved its decision on the motion until this morning, and held the accused to ball as before.
